Scott Mosby and Doug Kropp of Mosby Building Arts, Ltd. recently received Building Performance Institute (BPI) certifications that will help the design-build remodeling firm provide St. Louis homeowners with safe, energy-efficient homes.

To attain BPI certification, Mosby and Kropp successfully completed written and performance exams, as well as a written report, that tested their knowledge of BPI Technical Standards.

"We're certified to provide homeowners with cost-effective home improvements that solve potential health and safety hazards," Mosby said.

Sixteen other candidates from the Kirkwood remodeling firm are attending classes to become BPI certified.

"Our firm's focus on the home's function, as well as our commitment to education, have encouraged many employees to become BPI certified," Mosby said. "Mosby Building Arts' skilled professionals are determined to provide our customers with more than remodeling through our Total Home Program."

Mosby Building Arts has served St. Louis homeowners since 1947. Firm President Scott Mosby is nearing his 10th year as host of the KMOX Home Improvement Show. The Mosby Team has received numerous honors including Remodeling Magazine's Big 50 Award, the coveted Renaissance Award, as well as several Homer and Chrysalis Awards.
